ARCHITECTS

Architects consider many factors when designing window treatments for a building or space. These may include the size and shape of the windows, the room's orientation, the amount of natural light desired, the climate in which the building is located, and the intended use of the space.

INTERIOR DESIGNERS

Interior designers consider window treatments as an essential element in the overall design of a space. In addition to the functional considerations mentioned earlier, such as privacy and insulation, interior designers may also consider window treatments to add texture, color, or pattern to a room.

CONSTRUCTION

Construction companies have deadlines to meet! At Shades By Design, we understand that and make sure we communicate with the project managers to ensure no delays. Our multi-faceted team is well-rounded in design, architecture, and engineering, allowing us to provide services to any size project.

HOME AUTOMATION

Over time, technology has become more advanced and accessible than ever, allowing us to have control of anything right at our fingertips, including our window treatments.

Automated window treatments leave the days of tangled cords, hard-to-reach shades, and manually adjustable drapes and blinds in the past. It can be controlled with a remote, smartphone, tablet, home automation system, and even voice commands.

At Shades By Design, we can automate virtually any window treatment. From shades, blinds, and drapery to exterior shading solutions. In addition, you can adjust or schedule your window coverings to control light & glare, interior temperature, and the atmosphere conveniently from anywhere.
